INREASE IN RATES GIVEN

INTERSTATE COMMISSION TODAY GRANTS PEITION OF EASTERN RAILROADS.

OPINION IS DIVIDED

Commissioners Harlan and Clements Dissent—War Is One Cause of Body's Action.

By Associated Press.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Increases in freight rates approximating five per cent on all railroads between the Atlantic seaboard and the Mississippi north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers were granted today by the Interstate Commission in a divided opinion, except on certain commodities which comprise a large bulk of the traffic. The increases further apply to the railroads west of Buffalo and Pittsburg, granted a partial advance in the decision of last August which denied them altogether to the roads east of these points.

$30,000,000 More Revenue.

It is estimated the advanced rates will increase the annual income of the roads about $30,000,000. The commission makes its decision upon the showing of the railroad that in conditions upon which they previously asked relief they now were confronted with an emergency because of the war in Europe. With Commissioners Harlan and Clements dissenting the majority of the commission declared:

"Whatever the consequences of the war may prove to be, we must recognize the fact that it exists, the fact that it is a calamity without precedent and the fact that by it the commerce of the world has been disarranged and thrown into confusion. The means of transportation are indispensable agencies in our industrial life and for the common welfare should be kept abreast of public requirements."

New Facts Considered.

Summarizing the basis of its decision the majority report of the commission reads:

"The facts disclosed and occurrences originating subsequent to May 29 1914 as presented at the further hearing, may be summarized under three heads: First, complete returns for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914 and returns for succeeding months; second, the war in Europe; third, results of the origina lorder When these cases were originally submitted, as also when the original report was prepared the revenue and expenditures account for June, 1914 and the property investment accounts for that fiscal year were not available. The war was unforeseen and the results of our order were of course yet to come. Collectively, they present a new situation." The commission issued this order:

Commission's Order.

"It is ordered that respondents herein be, and they are hereby authorized to publish and file by not less than ten days notice to the Interstate Commerce Commission and to the general public, in the manner prescribed in Section 6 of the Act to regulate commerce, schedules which do not exceed the limits or transgress the limitations stated and prescribed in said report it is further ordered that the permission hereby granted does not waive any of the requirements of the commission's published rules relative to the construction and filing of tariff publications nor any of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce as amended except as to the notice to be given."

WALL STREET WAS NOT EXPECTING ANY DECISION

By Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission came unexpectedly to Wall street which had not expected definite word until next week. It came when the stock market was weak and helped bring a general recovery. Prices rose 1½ to 3 points above the low level of the session. Reading, one of the roads vitally concerned, regained 2 3-4 points and Baltimore and Ohio 1 3-4 Other eastern roads scored lesser gains. The rally was not maintained.

GARDNER TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN NAVY

APPEARS BEFORE COMMITTEE IN BEHALF OF INQUIRY RESOLUTION

CLAIMS SHORTAGE 18,000 MEN

Says Eighty of Nation's Fighting Vessels are not Ready in an Emergency

By Associated Press.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Representative Gardner before the House naval affairs committee read a long statement in support of his proposal of investigation of national defense by a special committee. He said:

"Out of thirty completed battleships, do you know that twelve of them are unavailable, without a long delay, on account of our refusal to pay the bills for manning them? Eighty fighting vessels of our modest navy are not available for battle in an emergency.

"I charge that our navy is 18,000 men short and a further shortage of 40,000 men is in sight. The general board which has actually made our plan estimates the enlisted forces of the navy as between 30,000 and 50,000 men short for the war.

"If any attention had been paid to the general board's emphatic appeal for our national safety, instead of only 27 battleships built and building and authorized we would now have 47 built and authorized Instead of 68 destroyers we should now have 187

"If we heeded the advice of the general board we should have a fleet of fast scouts ready. How many do you think we actually have? Just three of those that were authorized more than ten years ago"

EXPRESS COMPANIES ARE RECEIVING CONSIGNMENTS

Under certain restrictions the express companies operating here are receiving consignments of intoxicating liquors destined to persons in dry territory in Texas. Although the attorney general has ruled that liquor dealers cannot send printed copies of dispatches announcing the decision of the court on the Allison law the news of the court's action in knocking out the section prohibiting intra-state shipments into dry territory seems to have spread with amazing rapidity judged by the truck loads of whiskey packages consigned to addresses in dry territory that are being loaded on the trains today.

On the Somme the French lost 1200 men in prisoners and at least 1800 in dead. Our losses were under 200.

"In the Argonne forest our successful attacks resulted in the capture of some 7300 prisoners in addition to the war material There have been no important developments elsewhere in the west front.

Artillery Victory on Aisne is Claimed—Victory in Argonne Forest Reported

By Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 18.—The French war office this afternoon gave out an official communication as follows.

"The day of December 17 was marked, as we said yesterday, by an advance on our part in Belgium where every counter attack undertaken by the enemy failed in the region of Arras' a vigorous offensive made us masters of several trenches These are located at Auchy, Labassee, St. Laurent and Blangy. At this first mentioned place we occupied, for a front more than one kilometer long, almost all the first line trenches of the enemy in the region of Tracy-le-Val. On the Aisne and in the Champagne our heavy artillery won distinct advantages.

"In the Argonne the Germans blew up one of our trenches to the north of Four-de-Paris and endeavored to move out from their positions with three battalions of troops The infantry attack as well as the one they undertook at St. Hubert was repulsed. To the east of the Meuse and in the Vosges there is nothing to report."

SHOTS CONTINUE TO CROSS BORDER

STRAY BULLETS HIT ON AMERICAN SIDE OF LINE AT NACO.

ARMY OFFICERS INVESTIGATE

Most Seem to Come From Maytorena Forces, But Some Are Charged to Hill.

By Associated Press.

Naco, Ariz., Dec. 18.—Stray bullets from the Mexican side crossed the American line late last night and early today in the usual bombardment of the Maytorena trenches by the Carranza forces of Naco, Sonora. Reports concerning the bullets, their probable origin and damage done, are being systematically gathered by army officers.

Thirty-seven spent bullets were gathered by two officers last night just east of the American town Four bullets struck houses and stores here. One entered the United States immigration offices and two struck a store.

The firing today was of a listless sort. Most of the bullets crossing the border seemed to the army officers to come from the Maytorena line although occasionally ones were charged to General Hill's forces defending Naco.

Hill said today that the charge that his men fired in this direction on the theory that the shooting would be charged to Maytorena was disproved by the fact that the families of many of the soldiers were refugees on the American side. He reasoned that the soldiers would not endanger them intentionally.

VICTORY OVER RUSSIANS COMPLETE, BERLIN CLAIMS

Invading Center Less Than Thirty Miles From Warsaw—Austrians Win In Carpathians

PETROGRAD HAS NOT YET ADMITTED REVERSES

London Makes Announcement Of Annexation Of Egypt, Driving Turk From Africa

By Associated Press.

London, Dec. 18.—Again the Germans and Austrians seem to be on the crest of a battlewave as the interminable struggle in the east continues. Again Berlin is gay with flags, and again Petrograd declines to concede victory to the invaders.

Berlin and Vienna contend, however, that the Russians are falling back along the entire front from the Baltic to the Carpathians with the invading center less than thirty miles from Warsaw. To the south where a few weeks ago Russians were pouring over the Carpathians into Hungary combined Austro-German columns have now forced them back through the passes and it is asserted have advanced two thirds of the way across Galicia and are nearing the fortress of Lemberg occupied by the Russians early in the Galician campaign.

The Russian official announcement admits none of this. They dismiss the happenings in Galicia as engagements of no importance and class the operations to the west of Warsaw in the same category. It is claimed, however, that the extreme Russian right near Mlawa has thrust the Germans back and that Russian cavary has swung across the southern border of East Prussia.

In the western arena there have been no events of great importance. At least, none have been reported. Foot by foot, the allies appear to be forcing the Germans out of their trenches in Flanders and maintaining the pressure elsewhere on the front from the sea to Switzerland.

The British press today makes a feature of the annexation of Egypt and the Sudan which takes from the Sultan of Turkey 100,000,000 subects and 1,300,000 square miles of land. This action, moreover, robs the Turks of their last foothold in Africa, Italy having taken Tripoli a few years ago.

All England still is buzzing with talk of the German raid on the east coast, interest having been stimulated by the latest account coming out of Hartelpool. Many Germans arrested on the east coast after the raid have been liberated.

ANNUAL INSTITUTE OF TEACHERS BEGINS

PROF. JOHN H. KEEN OF AUSTIN DELIVERS ADDRESS TODAY.

MANY ARE HERE TO ATTEND

Nearly Every Teacher in County Present—Sessions Will Continue Through Wednesday.

Prof. John H. Keen of the University of Texas told Wichita county teachers assembled in their annual institute at the High School auditorium this morning that there was a tendency in modern education to place undue emphasis on specialization; that there was a tendency to start in too quick to teach the pupil to do something, instead of to somebody. He said the tendency was to push forward the idea that a boy ought to learn in school to do something to make a living.

He declared that some teachers were forgetting that character should be the product of education instead of learning how to do some particular thing. He said that the purpose of common school training should be to equip the pupil with the ideas which would enable him to learn to do many things when he got out into life.

Students Hear Talk.

When Prof. Keen made his address to the teachers the high school pupils were called into the auditorium and heard the address also giving it enthusiastic applause. Mr. Keen criticized another tendency in modern education which he termed "soft pedagogy;" that is the teachers trying to make the school work all play for the pupils. He said that such teachers were forgetting that the school is the preparatory ground for life. He said that while it might be all right to make the school work like play for the beginners that it ought to be made increasingly difficult as the pupil advanced throug hthe higher grades.

Before formally addressing the teachers Mr. Keen spoke in behalf of the Interscholastic Public Speaking and Athletic League urging the organization of a strong league in this county.

Nearly every teacher in the county schools was present this morning when the Wichita County Teachers' Institute was opened. The sessions will continue through Wednesday of next week. Rev. F. F. Walters delivered the invocation at the opening this morning. J. W. Bradley sang and an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Britain to which response was made on behalf of the teachers by C. L. Nickel. The regular program of the institute was then taken up.

PLEASE DON'T WAIT UNTIL THE LAST MINUTE

I'm sure that if YOU worked in a grocery store at this time of the year either as owner, clerk or delivery boy, you would realize what it means to Shop Early

The usual rule is one grand rush the last day or two before Christmas. And it's in such rushes that mistakes are made, feelings hurt and the happy Christmas spirit sadly handled.

I don't want that to happen, neither do you. You can help avoid it by giving me your Christmas dinner order this week. I'll deliver the order just when you say.

I'd be glad to see you personally with that order.

IN THE SPHERE OF WOMANKIND

Cupid's Rival.

Little Dannie Cupid's out of work,
Though he never has been known to shirk,
There is nothing he can do today,
'Cause Eugenics took his job away.

No longer girlies look at stars above
While a fellow prattles of his love;
Calculatingly they learn his wealth
Then they lead him to the Board of Health.

Romance of the olden days is dead,
Certificates of health you need to wed,
Tell a girl you love her tenderly,
"Yes?" she murmurs, "see a good M D."

Poor old Dannie Cupid's out of work
Though he never has been known to shirk;
Eugenics is the king of love today,
Cupid is a dead one, so they say.

FLORAL HEIGHTS SOCIETY WITH MRS. T. H. PEERY

Mrs. T. H. Peery was hostess to the Floral Heights Sunshine Circle Thursday afternoon in an unusually delightful meeting, the occasion being the Christmas grab bag of the club The house was exceedingly attractive in holiday attire and was bright with Christmas bells, festoons and mistletoe. In the center of the library an immense red bell hung and festoons of red and green were conveyed from that point to the windows and corners of the room where the ends were caught with clusters of mistletoe The packages for the grab bag were deposited on the library table on the arrival of the guests, to be later arranged for the grab bag An hour or so was spent in pleasant conversation with the usual fancy work in evidence and all were ushered into the dining room on the invitation of the hostess. The dining table was centered with a gaily decked Christmas tree in minature with the daintily wrapped bundles disposed at the base of the tree. Christmas stockings bearing numbers corresponding with the numerals on the packages were passed, and the draw was made in this manner. Numerous pretty bits of handwork were disclosed on unwrapping the bundles and after these had been fully admired delicious refreshments in two courses were served. For the guests of the club the hostess had provided Friendship booklets of charming design and sentiment as special souvenirs The meeting was a most pleasant one, due to the efforts of the hostess and her genius for entertaining. The guests present were Mesdames Fonville Nicholson, Kearey and Stanley, club members present being Mesdames Waggoner, Bullock, Fowler, Trevathan Kearby, Cox and the hostess

Figure it out any way you will, but the young man who is short on pool hall talent and cigarette smoking is the young man whose services are always in demand and who draws the best salary.

And another advantage is that if you send your Christmas packages early they will be received in time to pass them along to some other fellow—provided the recipient does not take a fancy to the gift.

Perhaps it was just the right thing for the powers at war to refuse to declare a Christmas truce. Every one of them would have taken advantage of the occasion to make preparations to kill each other on a larger scale after the truce was at an end. Let 'em fight it out to a finish while they are at it, and the quicker they exhaust their resources the better for the world in general.

Wheat was quoted in St. Louis yesterday at $1.20 per bushel. If this European war holds on until next summer the chances are that wheat will be selling for about $2.00 per bushel. That just reminds us again that, with a favorable season, Wichita county wheat farmers will furnish the consuming world with about one million bushels.

It now develops that the negro boy (Williams) who killed young Scroggins, a white boy, and threw his body in an abandoned well near Fort Worth, was a graduate of the State reformatory, having been sent there for stealing. He was released about six months ago, but inasmuch as he stole the pistol with which to kill Scroggins, it would appear that his term in the reformatory did him no good, or was not of sufficient length. In fact and truth, very few people are reformed at reformatories or penitentiaries either, as for that matter. In most instances, it hardens and makes worse criminals of them than they were at the beginning. About the only way to reform a criminal is to keep him in confinement.

If you know that a certain person is going to give you a present at the glad, glad Christmas time, who not break down the barriers of convention and tell him just what you want? It will work out better in the long run, and will perhaps save said person a lot of money. We had an idea that a certain friend of ours was going to give us a Meraschaum pipe that would cost him perhaps a dollar and eighty cents, so we went to him and kindly but firmly told him we'd prefer a plug of thick natural leaf. Now, that made us both happy. It saved him enough to buy a mess of liver at the market, and we will get what we want.—Mineral Wells Index.

The Belgians are great sufferers in this war, but those who have had the most to do with bringing this great misfortune upon the people of that little country should at least be decent enough to feed and cloth them, and by this we mean Germany, France and England. There are people, millions of them, in those countries who are wallowing in their wealth, and they should be made to part with some of it, instead of depending upon the kindness and generosity of neutral nations to pay for their meanness.

WE STILL THINK OUR UNCLE IS THE LEADER.

Power compels respect. Perhaps this is why so many Americans, perhaps a great majority, are sympathizing with the allies, or rather Great Britain, in the European war. Great Britain, according to Admiral Fletcher, has the only navy in the world that could, single-handed, whip the American navy off the seas, and for this very reason—the fear that Great Britain will, at some time in the future, see proper to use her great sea forces against the United States—there is a clamor or howl going up for a larger navy for the United States. In our humble judgment, Great Britain already has too much of a navy for one power, and if the Germans can succeed in reducing the British navy to about the size of other great powers, Americans should not be worried.—Wichita Falls Times.

We have been reading of late a vast amount of "dope"—that describes it to the "t"—about the poor showing we could make against a hostile power, both on sea and on land. We are prone to believe that this is a "scare-crow" somebody has set up to frighten W. W., who seems to us to be about the calmest man in the nation. What's the matter with Great Britain anyway? We suppose every American newspaper reader has asked himself and his neighbor that question. Why don't they get out and "lick" those Germans on the sea? They've got the biggest navy in the world, we have always read; they should get busy. That's the way the average citizen talks—one of whom we are. There's no use in any body getting scared up about your uncle; he's been tending to himself lo! these many years, and lo! the many years to come he'll be doing one and the same thing—protecting his shores from a foreign invasion. Hooray for the U. S. (A.) and your Uncle!—Abilene Reporter.

MAJESTIC TONIGHT

KING OF SPAIN CLOSE OBSERVER OF WAR

By Associated Press.

Madrid, Dec. 17.—King Alfonso takes a deep interest in the war. He never goes to bed until he has seen the French official statement.

With the principal members of his General Staff the king works out the positions of the armies on a large scale French Ordnance survey map which hangs in a prominent position on his office wall. He discusses every movement eagerly and enthusiastically with his generals, explaining to them what he would have done had he been in the place of the opposinb commanders. Those who have been present at these midnight gatherings declare that the young monarch's criticisms are remarkably shrewd and show a firm grasp of the underlying principles of modern warfare.

Opinion generally regarding the war is divided, clericals, conservatives and the military element sympathizing with Germany, although there are some notable exceptions, such as Senor Maura, the leader of the conservative party, who has declared his sympathies for France. The radicals go so far as to advocate the intervention of Spain at the side of France, while the republicans are in favor of a benevolent neutrality.

By Associated Press.

"Let Riggs Rig You Up"

At The Theaters

The Lydia Margaret.

The vaudeville bill opening yesterday at the Lydia Margaret for the last half of this week was exceedingly well received. The opening act, Fosto and Fuzzy, is very clever and the equilibrist with his dog give dance numbers, skip rope, turn somersaults and have an act that is pleasing in its novelty. It is hard to tell which deserves the most praise—Fosto or Fuzzy. DeFay and Moore do a little bit of everything in their act, which closes the show, and do all of it very well. They play various musical instruments and Miss Moore sings "The Dancing Craze," her own composition. Her imitations are also good, especially the imitation of an old fashioned phonograph with a cracked record. Mary Fuller is to be seen in "A Girl of the People" tonight.

The Majestic.

Wallace Berry and Leo White are featured in an Essanay comedy, "Rivalry and War," and a Biograph comedy, "They Called It Baby," is also on the program. The feature offering, however, is "Martin Chuzzlewit," a dramatization of the novel by Dickens. Alan Hale and Isabel Rea are featured. Disinherited by his grandfather for engaging himself to Mary Graham without his consent, Martin Chuzzlewit is spurned by his uncle, Anthony Chuzzlewit, his cousin Jonas, and the rest of his avaricious relatives. Mary Tapley, sweetheart of the widow Lupin, who keeps Blue Dragon Inn, induces young Martin to go with him to America, where they will make their fortunes. Seth Pecksniff curries favor with old Martin and Jonas Chuzzlewit, believing that Pecksniff will inherit the estate, strikes a bargain to marry Seth's daughter, Mercy. Anthony Chuzzlewit's health is bad, but he does not die soon enough to suit Jonas, so the latter poisons him. How the crime was fastened upon Jonas, and how young Martin came back from America to win his grandfather's favor and the hand of Mary Graham, are the closing scenes of this absorbing drama.

The Empress.

A two part Majestic is the feature picture at this theatre today. A synopsis of "Paid With Interest" follows:

Mame is a waitress in a cheap eating place. Tom is an electrician's helper. Calling to fix wires, he meets Mame and falls in love with her. She later returns his affection and they plan to marry when he has obtained a raise and becomes a regular electrician himself. A rift comes in their lute, however, by the advent of George a wealthy broker, whose car breaks down near the restaurant and who comes in to get a cup of coffee. Mame serves him and he becomes enamored of her and she is flattered by his attentions. Gradually her love for Tom wanes and a real affection dawns for the broker. Tom does not believe his attentions are honorable and believes that only his money has attracted Mame and he plans to ruin the broker. Called to the office building of the broker's office to repair wires, while working on the roof he overhears a conversation from the broker's office to his agents and gets wise to the fact that the broker is to give a message to sell at a certain time; if the agent doesn't get a call at that time he is to buy. At the time appointed, the broker phones to sell, and it is apparent that to buy will ruin him, but Tom, getting wise by his wire on the roof, cuts it, so that the broker's agent cannot get the message, and the broker is wiped out. Tom is delighted, thinking that now Mame and the broker cannot marry, but is astounded to discover that it has made no difference with Mame. Tom then realizes that his jealousy has made it hard for the girl and the man, who is an honorable suitor, and resolves to make it up to them somehow.

The broker starts life over again, marries Mame and they are happy. Tom remains the true pal of both and though unhappy and in love with George's wife, protects George in every way from himself. George, to gamble, steals his wife's jewels and loses the money for which he pawned them, but Tom reclaims them and returns them and George promises not to gamble again, but does. The wife says it is all right so long as he loves her and is true to her. One day George is seriously injured and dies. Tom is forced to break the news to George's wife. He finds a watch on George and plans to take this little memento to the wife and thus soften the blow. When he opens the watch he finds there the photo of another woman and realizes that George is unworthy of his wife and her love for him. To save her illusion, he takes a watch from his own person, removes the photo of George's wife from it puts it in George's own watch and carries it to Mame, who thereafter believes that George loved her.

The Gem.

Norma Talmadge, Van Dyke and Antonio Moreno are featured in a two part Vitagraph, "The Peace Maker."

Jack Strong and Minnie Lee are sweethearts. He is called out of town on business and meets his friend, Glover, who requests him to act as escort to the chaperone of a supper party which he is giving in honor of his fiancee, an actress. Jack accepts with very bad grace; and some kind friend informs Minnie that Jack Strong was seen at a popular cafe with a chum and two actresses. When he returns, Minnie gives him no chance to explain the incident and a bitter quarrel follows. Jack goes to his old friend, Lund, a retired artist, with his troubles and the latter in the role of peacemaker, invites them both—unknown to each other—to an afternoon tea. Leighton and Kitty, another young couple, are also invited. By pre-arranged plans Leighton bestows particular attention upon Minnie, while Kitty proves a charming listener to all Jack has to say. Noting the growing jealousy between Minnie and Jack, Lund smiles to himself. Later Jack is angrily telling Lund of the heartache, the "green eyed monster" is causing him when they see Minnie coming. Jack hides in an alcove. Minnie sobs out her troubles to the kindly old gentleman, but obstinately refuses to make up with Jack. Lund then shows her a letter from Glover explaining the whole affair. She is very humble and fearing she has lost Jack forever bursts out crying again. Lund then beckons to Jack, who gently takes Minnie in his arms. A happy reconciliation follows.

FACE FOLIAGE FASHIONS OFTEN AFFECTED BY WAR

London Wonders Whether Present Strife Will Bring New Styles in Mustache.

By Associated Press.

London, Dec. 18.—There is some newspaper speculation as to whether the war will follow precedent in instituting any change in fashions of what some of the writers delight to call "face fur." The Waterloo campaign introduced the moustache among the English troops, for it was first borrowed from certain Austrian officers, then allies. It was taken up by the Guards, who resented very much any attempt to follow the fashion on the part of mere line regiments, while as for civilians it will be remembered, says the Manchester Guardian, how great a snub Clive Newcome drew upon himself by wearing a ferocious moustache.

The Crimean war, brought in the whisker again, in desperate civilian emulation of the gallant officers, who, having grown all their hair from sheer necessity and perhaps from a certain compalonable warmth in the bitter winter in the trenches, brought back their new appendages to grace Bond Street and Pall Mall.

The British war office has made some effort to encourage the growth of moustaches among subalterns without conspicuous success and there are few signs that the trenches of 1914 are going to bring in a new fashion of beards. "As far as one has observed," says the Guardian, "the average British soldier's first desire when he gets a breathing space from the trenches and sometimes in the trenches themselves, is to rid himself of the beard and whiskers, though one has seen a few stalwarts in base towns still bearded, and it must be confessed that they look much more ave inspiring than the clean shaven variety. French soldiers near the firing lines are much less abashed by beards and contrive to wear the most ragged growth with something of 'an air' while the younger Belgians seem to follow the British in their preference for clean shaving."

FAMILY AVOIDS SERIOUS SICKNESS

By Being Constantly Supplied With Thedford's Black-Draught.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whittaker, of this place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble.

Ten years ago a friend told me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, which I did, and I found it to be the best family medicine for young and old.

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught."

Thedford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and has been found to regulate weak stomachs, aid digestion, relieve indigestion, colic, wind, sunken headache, sick stomach, and similar symptoms.

It has been in constant use for more than 70 years, and has benefited more than a million people.

FERGUSON HAS PLAN FOR HANDLING PARDON QUESTION

By Associated Press.

Austin, Texas, Dec. 18.—When Governor-elect James E. Ferguson assumes the reins of government in the latter part of January one of the first matters expected to receive his attention will be the question of pardons. Mr. Ferguson it is said plans to systematize this matter; that is, he proposes, it is stated here, to establish regular pardon days on which he will devote his time to considering applications for executive clemency. It has been figured that under the system in vogue for years past, at least one-third of the time of the

EUROPEANS IN FAR EAST NOW BEING CALLED HOME

Nearly All Nations Are Represented in Colonies and Are Affected By War.

By Associated Press.

Pekin, Dec. 18.—Immediately after the declaration of war reservists of the several continental nations that were implicated proceeded by previous standing arrangements, back to Europe or to various centers of mobilization in the Far East. The Germans went to Tsingtau; Frenchmen to various garrisons along the coasts or proceded homeward; Austrians went by way of America back to their native land. The British have only now begun to move. Reserve officers, of which there are a number in the Far East, have been summoned to return to England, and with them several hundred young men are leaving China, throwing up their positions and paying their own expenses back home to volunteer. German, French and Austrian business houses were at first seriously affected as a consequence of the drafting of their clerks. Now the British interests are begining to suffer depletion in their staffs and also the Chinese customs service, the directors of which are largely British.

COMMERCIAL ASPETS OF EUROPEAN WAR STUDIED

Chamber of Commerce of United States is Watching Over Effects on This County.

By Associated Press.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Through close co-operation with departments of the federal government here, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States is keeping virtually the entire business community of the country fully informed upon the commerce of the United States, domestic or foreign.

The national alliance of more than 600 commercial organizations was created early in 1912. The membership of the chamber stretches into every nook and corner of the country. Included in its 600 allied organizations are great and small chambers of commerce in every state and every commercially important city of the Union. Their total individual membership passes the quarter million mark and every line of industry in the country is represented.

With the outbreak of the European war the need of specific information as to its probable and actual influence on business conditions was very urgent. Under the direction of E. H. Goodwin, general secretary of the national chamber, the clerical force already organized here to form a clearing house of national and international information on business conditions was augmented and its energies directed to meeting the emergency. The bi-weekly bulletins sent out to members were increased in scope. They took up subject by subject problems of neutrality regulations, contraband proclamations by warring powers, congressional enactments to meet war emergencies as they developed, the banking situation, the cotton crisis and every new factor affecting business, brought up by the war. Twice a week members were advised specifically of developments in each case. The chamber has a force of trained men at work among the departments following up every clue to information and they are meeting with ready assistance from department officials. Some of the information sent out is of a very confidential character and to protect it, publication of the bulletins is forbidden.

Now a systematic study of the foreign commerce of the belligerent powers to determine just where openings lie for increasing American foreign trade has been begun. Additional bulletins are being prepared, country by country, showing for instance, just what articles comprised Germany's trade with her present enemies or with neutral countries now cut off from her markets. Exhaustive investigation of American, British, German and other statistics for preceding years is being made and lengthy comparative tables have been issued. The work is still going on and as it progresses manufacturers of any article will be able to see at a glance just what opportunities await them in any country.

Paralleled almost day to day with presentations of the financial situation in foreign countries, showing where moratoria exist and their duration, what embargoes on exportation have been declared and to what extent war operations have interferred with commerce in any direction, the charts are said to have proved of a most illuminating character to the American business world. They bring down to specific details the broad inquiries of the government.

FRANCE PROVIDING WORK FOR INTERNED GERMANS

Many of Prisoners Are Employed as Dock Laborers and Earn Small Sums.

By Associated Press.

Bordeaux, Dec. 18.—How to find something for the German prisoners of war to do, is a question which is preoccupying the French government. There are now about 100,000 men interned in various towns in Southern and Western France. Many of them belong to one skilled trade, but to employ them at their own craft would aggravate the situation of French unemployed and give rise to protests from trade unions.

It has been decided to use a large number of prisoners as dock laborers in various ports, loading and unloading ships of commerce, in place of local men serving with the army. After the cost of their keep has been deducted, they will be given what they earn to buy tobacco and other small comforts.

AN UNDYING FAITH

When the birth of Christ was proclaimed and when peace good will to men rang out o'er the Judean hills a new era for humanity began. New hope, new ideals, new deification, new religion, a new and abiding faith; which, as the years have raced down the track of time proven its value, its uplift, its divine origin in all of its adherents. Guillotine, stake, sword and cannon have all been faced calmly, and sometimes joyously, but always sustained by a faith that no human mind or pen can portray adequately or successfully.

In trying to express this divine faith, the most beautiful monuments that inspired minds and skilled hands could conceive and execute have dotted this world from end to end, thus marking the epoch and the act even so that many inspiring acts have been given to humanity through them. In times of peace we erect them to the memory of other days, other deeds and other lives that they may turn men's heart to death and to God. A gentle reminder that there is no abiding place here, yet marks that undying faith that must indeed live beyond the grave.

MARKED SLUMP IN BATTING AVERAGES

FEWER PLAYERS REACH 300 CLASS IN MAJORS THIS YEAR.

BASEBALL AS PEACE FACTOR

Has Done More to Civilize Philippines Than Anything Else, It is Declared.

By Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 15—A comparison of the official batting averages of the National League for the seasons of 1913 and 1914 developes some interesting and puzzling features. Including all those players who participated, in any manner, in fifteen or more games each season the roster for this year shows 188 names against 183 twelve monhts ago. Notwithstanding this increase in the total number of batters enrolled in the records but fifteen of the 1914 hitters hammered their way into the .300 or better ranks while in 1913 the select list included twenty-three names.

When these lists are again reduced by eliminating all those players who did not participate in at least fifty games or approximately one third of the season, the record shows that fourteen batters qualified in 1913 to nine this season Of this number but four, Daubert, Becker, Wheat and Magee appear in both lists Whether the pitching, which the batters faced during 1914 was better than a year ago or a sort of sympathetic slump existed in the National League it is impossible to state but the fact remains that a number of those who batted their way into the .300 class in 1913 could not duplicate this feat during the past summer.

Cravath, of the Philadelphia club, hit .341 in 1913 and .298 in 1914. Viox of Pittsburg dropped from .317 to .265; Zimmerman of Chicago from .313 to .296; Chief Meyers of New York from .312 to .288; Lobert of Philadelphia from .300 to .275 and Wagner of Pittsburg from .300 to .252. This was the first time since 1897 that Wagner dropped below .300 but this was not surprising in the case of Honus, for like other batting heroes of the past, Wagner was at last forced to bow to the all powerful arm of Father Time. For the period from 1897 to 1913 inclusive Wagner had a grand average of .341. His highest mark was .380 made in 1900 and his lowest .300 made in 1913.

Another peculiar feature is that three of the four players who figure in the .300 or better class for both seasons increased their averages while all around them the heavy hitters were dropping below their last year's performances. Jake Daubert, the champion batter of the league for 1913 and 1914, fell from .350 to .329 but he was the exception to the general rule of the quartet.

Beals Becker raised his 1913 average of .316 to .325; Zach Wheat gained eighteen points by batting .319 in place of .304 and Sherwood Magee moved up from .306 to .314.

Brickley's Record

Speaking of records and averages brings to mind the fact that Charles Edward Brickley, the captain of the Harvard University team of 1914, will leave quite some figures behind him when he is graduated next spring. Brickley since he entered Harvard as a freshman in 1911 has piled up 289 points for the Crimson sixty-five of which were made on the Freshman eleven and the balance as a varsity player During the three years that Brickley played on the varsity eelven, Harvard scored 586 points of which he made 222. In view of the fact that he figured in but two of the nine games of the 1914 schedule his record is all the more remarkable. If it had not been for his attack of appendicitis and the following operation early in October it is quite likely that Brickley would have scored more than 50 per cent of the points made by the Crimson teams of 1912-13-14, as it is, his record, which follows, will afford a high mark at which future football stars can aim:

Year	Touchdowns	Goals	Field Goals	Total Points
1911	6*	5	10	65
1912	10	0	13	99
1913	8	0	11	81
1914	6	3	1	42
Totals	30	8	35	287

*Touchdown counted 5 points in 1911

Baseball vs. Militarism

Baseball as a panacea for militarism ridden Europe is put forth by a Harvard alumnus, who has spent some years abroad In a letter to the Harvard alumni weekly, he writes:

"My idea of the best cure for this war condition would be 'more baseball.' I believe that if they had had a regular baseball league in Europe with Berlin, Paris, London, Vienna, Antwerp, etc, participating, as well as a minor league taking in Belgrade, Brussels and a few other such places, the fans would never tolerated the breaking out of this war during the baseball season, and if they had postponed it until the world's series was over it would have given them all time to cool off, and they probably would not have had any war They say that baseball has done more to civilize the Philippines than the American army, constabularies, and the missionaries put together."

The stadium fever continues to spread throughout the land. Philadelphia and Chicago civic associations are now discussing the feasibility of erecting immensive structures capable of seating 100,000 spectators It is the idea of those fostering the plans that stadiums of this size can be used for many festivities and military displays, track meets, pageants, choral festivities an dmilitary displays The estimated cost ranges from one to two million dollars and the receipts, on paper at least are expected to equal all disbursements in the course of a few years

Simpson's Christmas

By KENNETH RAND

"OOLS!" said Mr Simpson. "Idiots!" he added "Even if they are my own relatives!" he supplemented with a dogged shake of his partially bald head.

The souvenir postal card which called forth his opprobrious language had just arrived.

"Look at this, will you?"

He turned the card over in his fingers.

"'Peace on earth, good will to men!'" Mr Simpson read the inscription. Then he turned it over.

"'We want you with us day after tomorrow for a good old fashioned family reunion around the festal Christmas board!'" he read in three lines of handwriting on the other side of the card

"There you are!" he exclaimed wrathfully. "There you are, doggone it!"

He waved the card violently around in the air at arm's length as he continued muttering.

"They send you one of these paper doilies from a madhouse dining room," went on Mr Simpson to the listening walls of the room of which he was the only occupant—"with 'Peace on earth, good-will to men' on one side, and on the other an invitation to take a six-hour trip out into the slushy country for a rotten meal with a gang of people who drive me crazy at the thought of being related to, every time I see 'em."

"Here I am," he said, regretfully shaking his head over his hard lot in life, "here I am, planning that I'll be comfortable for at least one Christmas, anyway. Family away in Florida for the winter; me here all alone, to do just as I like—and now along comes this—this summons to spend a day being miserable!"

Suddenly Mr. Simpson sat up straight in his chair

"By jerry!" he ejaculated suddenly. "By jerry—what's to hinder me from being the martyr in the cause? What's to prevent me from putting an end to this dad-dinged practice—huh?

"Suppose I don't go to this Christmas reunion? Suppose I stay home here and enjoy my day of peace on earth in the way I want to? What will happen?

"Why, next year there won't be a single, solitary soul of my relations that will get together in an affair of this kind. I'll have pointed the way—I'll be the example they've been waiting to follow away from custom—and, by jerry, I'll bet you the thing will spread, too!

"And I'll be responsible for it!" added Mr. Simpson joyously—"if I stay away, just this once, from this Christmas party I've been invited to!

"And think of the good I'm doing to other people, too!" he added "How grateful the public will be to me for pointing out the way to their own release from this idiotic custom of sacrificing themselves!

"Why, I shouldn't wonder if there would be a statue erected to me as the first man who stayed away from a family reunion at this holiday! I can see it now, labeled, 'The People's Santa Claus—He Gave Us What We Wanted Most for Christmas!'"

And so, in pleasant reflection upon the perfection of his plan as he had carried it out, Mr Simpson's thoughts ran until Christmas morning.

It was Mr Simpson's idea to eat his Christmas dinner, ordered in from a nearby restaurant, in the solitude of his own home, bare as it was of his family.

At one o'clock the waiter brought in the heavy tray. Mr Simpson superintended the arrangement of its contents on the table in the dining room.

And it was just one fifteen, as he stood rubbing his hands at the prospect of eating alone on Christmas for the first time in his life—when the doorbell rang.

"Doggone it!" burst out Mr. Simpson. "What's that?"

For a moment he decided not to open the door Then he changed his mind and went downstairs, two at a time. It might be some bad news from his absent family.

He threw open the portal—and staggered back into the hall.

And after him trooped a gayly shouting and laughing party of sixteen—Mr. Simpson's relatives!

"We came to eat our Christmas dinner here!" cried one of his aunts.

"You poor man—we knew you'd be all alone!" gushed a first cousin.

"We didn't want you to eat your Christmas dinner all by yourself," chortled another female relation, "so we brought ours here in baskets to eat with you!"

Mr. Simpson looked over the crowd still streaming into his front hall. His lips pursed tightly as he led the way to the dining room.

But all he said, unintelligibly to his unexpected guests, was:

"Well, I guess they won't put up that statue of me as Santa Claus this year!"

Common Sense Will Guide the Destinies of the Christmas Purse for 1914

This will be a season of sensible giving. Everywhere people are turning from the habit of giving frivolous luxuries and this year it will reach its climax.

Mother needs a pair of warm slippers instead of a pair of earrings.

Father can get along without a new pipe, but a pair of House Slippers would be pleasing and sensible.

A box of candy to sister is soon gone but the toothache remains. Be kind to her; she needs a pair of bedroom slippers.

Brother's skates only wear out his shoes. Better get him a pair of those Selz Waukemphast.

Baby's toys would all be broken the day after, besides maybe they are not made in America, and why should I send my gold to Europe to be used in destroying churches and humanity! Baby would be satisfied with a picture book and a new pair of pretty shoes—"Made in the U. S. A."

Then there's uncle and aunty and cousin Mary, Lucy and Bertha, Fred and John—shoes for all!

Oh! what a joyous Christmas this will be when millions of dollars spent last year in useless giving go this year for useful gifts.

Christmas slippers are here in abundant variety. Be sensible, buy sensibly.

PARIS PUBLIC LIBRARIES KEPT OPEN DURING WAR

Paris, Dec. 17—At the beginning of the war the proposed closing of the public libraries, as well as some other state and city institutions, was much discussed, but it was finally decided to leave them open Statistics for the month of August and September of the number of books loaned to readers show that the decision was a wise one

More than 43,000 vloumes were loaned in August and more than 60,000 in September The figure for October will be even greater for the month of September The fact is taken as indicating a very happy tranquility of mind on the part of the reading public in Paris

COUNCIL ACCEPTS AUTOMOBILE ENGINE

ORDER IS PASSED FOR NEW SEWER WORKS TO PROCEED.

JOINT HOSPITAL BONDS SOLD

Council Authorizes Early Collection of Sewer Rents and Dog Taxes For Year.

The new automobile fire engine was accepted by the city council Thursday night, the machine having come up to the tests prescribed in the specifications. The council also passed an order for the sewer extensions decided upon at last week's meeting and sold the hospital bonds to John E. Sutherlin of Kansas City. Mr Sutherlin's certified check for $25 000 was deposited.

Several other matters received the attention of the aldermen. The collection of sewer rents and dog taxes was authorized and the city tax collector was authorized to employ the necessary help. The council also paid the interest on the hospital bonds but this money goes right back into the city treasury.

The hospital bonds are sold for par value and accrued interest, but the city pays Mr. Sutherlin $625 to pay for printing and other expenses. Mr Sutherlin yesterday entered into an agreement with the county commissioners for their issue also, so that all the bonds are now sold.

In accepting the engine, the council heard the report of Fire Chief McClure that it had come up to the tests in every way and all of the alderman who had watched it perform felt that the city was safe in accepting it Mr. Langthorne, factory representative, was relieved of further duty in connection with the demonstration of the machine. Fireman Henry Smith was granted ten days leave of absence.

Plan to Recover Tiber's Treasures

FROM the River Tiber that Rome once worshiped to a bustling office in Church street, New York city, is a far cry, but the void between the two has been spanned.

Beneath those sluggish waters, which received the prayer of a "Citizen of Rome" and were braved by Goth and Gaul and Vandal, lie, according to archaeologists, treasures such as the museums of the world do not boast; treasures of bronze and of marble and gold, carved or molted into wonder works of art; and, perhaps, that fabled Candelabrum of the Jews, of pure gold, of weight one talent and a half, and three feet high.

The cry is to recover those treasures. It was sent to James C. Stewart, a New York contractor, years ago, and though nothing has been accomplished since then he has not lost interest in the project, but is willing and eager to give what assistance he can, either technical or financial, to recover the lost treasures of an ancient day.

First Proposed Ten Years Ago.

It was nearly ten years ago that Mr. Stewart first heard of the project from Professor Ciro, the Italian archeologist. At that time Mr. Stewart was in England astonishing the engineering world by his feats and arousing the admiration of King Edward and the admiralty.

He was one of the first American pioneers to show England the efficiency of American methods. His fame spread; 'way off in Italy esthetic dreamers and practical promoters heard of him. And they wrote him of what lay beneath the Tiber and asked whether he could undertake the work, declaring that the Italian government was ready to grant concessions.

Mr. Stewart was busy and the affair languished. The treasures still remain where they were. But as the years have passed Mr. Stewart's interest—practical, artistic and sentimental — has increased, until he is ready to associate himself with any one ready to encourage the work or to aid any one who wants to undertake it.

Mr. Stewart looks like a typical keen and alert American business man. He is, but the lure of that treasure hunting is upon him and he admits it with a smile.

"It's entirely practicable, though," said he. "It would be the easiest sort of job. There would be no question of diverting the course of the Tiber, but merely one of dredging it, and that could be readily and quickly accomplished. We own the most powerful dredging machines in the world, and the Tiber's bed of soft silt would offer us very little difficulty. We would just scoop the bed of the river up and practically go placer mining for the treasures that I am ready to believe are there.

"I've never contemplated doing the job, because it's never really been a concern of mine. All I know is that several archeologists and promoters wrote me about it years ago, but the matter dropped there.

"I know, too, that the plan has been frequently proposed, but for some reason or other never executed. Why the Italian government doesn't take it in hand I don't understand; we would do it over here. It would not be particularly costly and the findings, I'm quite sure, would give us some of the most wonderful works of art as well as treasures to which an enormous sentimental interest would attach.

"If others do seriously mean to prosecute the work I am perfectly willing to associate myself with them, or just to give financial aid. It seems to me that there are enough art lovers in this country who would be willing to subscribe the comparatively small amount necessary to carry it out. Personally I don't know why it isn't done or when it will be done, but I am sure it will be sooner or later.

"I received my first intimation of the idea when I was over in England, in 1902, building the Westinghouse works and doing work for the English admiralty. They made quite a bit of fuss over our work at that time; the rapidity of the methods, the general efficiency, seemed to amaze them, and as a result it got to be embarrassing to pick up a paper. Well, I suppose that's why the Italians sent me the data about the River Tiber.

Passively Interested.

"It interested me, of course, but mostly in a historical and sentimental way. I never took any action. But I've been—what shall I say?—passively interested ever since.

"The idea that in that river bed may lodge wonderful statues of marble and bronze and busts and coins, as well as implements and weapons of all sorts, and that the Candelabrum of the Covenant that stood in the Tabernacle in King David's house may be resting there, covered over with the silt of centuries, makes one keen to help to dig them out or to encourage others to do so."

The quest for buried treasure is as old as the human race itself. Even since the mythical expedition of the Argonauts in search of the Golden Fleece of Colchis, men have wandered all over the face of the earth in their search for the hidden wealth that is reputed to lie secure in many hiding places. Even in this day of cynical incredulity we hear, now and again of the outfitting of a new expedition for the recovery of the pilfered gold that noted freebooters extracted from the holds of the Spanish galleons.

It is not remarkable, then, that even so hard-headed an individual as a prosperous New York contractor should be interested in the recovery of a treasure that will make the pirate spoils of Captain Kidd look, in comparison, like a handful of coppers. Nor is it strange that the kingdom of Italy should be willing to give its consent to a plan that will enrich its coffers as well as benefit its national capital, the city of Rome.

SCENE ALONG THE TIBER.

Rangers Learn How to Cook.

Men who are taking the Forest Rangers' course at the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin, realize the bugbears of camp cookery to the uninitiated. As a result they have taken the opportunity offered them of spending four hours a week in the domestic science department, planning food combinations, learning the fundamentals of cookery and studying the market to know what and when to buy. Practice is given in the preparation of such foods as condensed milk, desiccated eggs, dried fruits and dehydrated vegetables.

A sample day's rations prepared by the forest rangers follows:

Breakfast—Stewed prunes, cream of wheat, bacon, fried potatoes, toast and coffee. Dinner—Tomato soup, beefsteak, carrots, mashed potatoes, bread and butter and pumpkin pie. Supper—Creamed chipped beef, boiled potatoes, bread, butter, jam and tea.

A Spring Touch.

Mrs Smart—George, dear, while you are having money troubles I ought to tell you that I learned today why your rival, Mr. Flibb's, credit has suddenly become so good.

Smart—Well, why?

Mrs. Smart—I overheard some one remark that Flibb's finances must be all right, because his wife was wearing such elegant new hats and gowns

CHEERFUL LETTER FROM DR. HILL IN SAN ANTONIO

Is Located in New Pastorate and Finds Regular Folks There to Give Him Greeting.

The Times has received the following:

To my friends in and out of the church in the goodly city of Wichita Falls, greeting:

I am vain enough to presume that you would like to hear from me and my good wife, and to know something how we are moving off in this great, cosmopolitan, wicked old city of the Alamo. It is so new to me that I am dazed and have not yet been able to get my bearings. Not because it is a big city; Dallas is a big city and a great city, but it is because it is not Dallas but San Antonio. The two cities are as different as if they were divided by the sea. The ideals, the traditions, and nearly forty thousand of the population are different from anything I have known before. The atmosphere is different—so different from North Texas, that it must take me some time to properly adjust myself to it. I will have to become acclimated, as it were.

There is a great deal of wealth here, and much of it is in my church; but there is a great deal of worldiness here and some of that I find is in my church also. Still there are quite a number who are good, consecrated Christians. They are very wealthy and could make fools of themselves in great shape; but they have too much sense and too much religion to do it. Many of them are of the older families of the wealthy class and they have gotten used to "matters of abundance" and it does not make fools of them. It is the upstart, the man or woman who lived on bacon and beans until they were grown and then suddenly struck "pay gravel"—it is that class who get their heads turned, unless they have some brains in those heads and the grace of God in their hearts We have some of that sort here. Their daddies punched cows and their mothers followed the chuck wagon and lived in dugouts for years. But now they are rich in "gear and gold," and they do not know how to handle themselves. Poor things. I tremble for them and especially for their children.

I have the finest church building, I suppose in all Southwest Texas. It is a beauty, furnished with every convenience and situated in the most beautiful section of the city. It is known all over the city as the "silk stocking" church. Just how my twenty-five cent hose will mix up with this bunch is a matter of the wildest conjecture. They seem to think that I am all right; a new broom sweeps clean; but how the matter will end up remains to be seen.

One thing I have settled in my mind, never to be shaken; I am going to preach a full gospel and be a faithful witness for my Lord, if such a course sends me to the brush—to the "chapparal" as they say here. Well, I once served as most Methodist preachers have served, a circuit in the country and I can do it again. I am a sort of "country hunk" anyway; it would not take as long to renew the acquaintance of Old Josh Bagge and his family as I fear it will take to get me lined up with some people I happen to know. But jesting aside, I am overwhelmed with the evident responsibility that rests upon me here. The people gave us a great reception. They gave us two, indeed; for thy gave one specifically for my wife and I went along.

Man, those were some receptions. You ought to have seen my poor little old wife doing the high jump at these blowouts. But she got by all right. I spilt coffee on my breeches and bursted an important button off my vest. Think of it. The women (and a big crowd of them, too), had an elaborate program, one item of which was to present Mrs. Hill with an armful of American Beauty roses, and the lady who presented them made a fine speech which was cheered to the echo. Then Mrs. H. of course had to respond. I felt for her. For my wife is not what you would call a great speaker—especially in public, albeit, she nearly always has "liberty" as the old preachers used to say when she furnishes me private instruction. But on the occasion in question she did herself proud. She said just the right thing. Everybody said so.

We had a tough time getting settled down to housekeeping. The man who was in the house we finally occupied did not get out for about two weeks after we reached the city and it rained and rained.

Finally we got into our house and the question of negroes came up. That, as all the readers of The Times know is a difficult question in all places in this country. I hired an old woman and an old crippled man. It was the best I could do at the time and we were compelled to have help in getting things to rights. The old woman did very well; but I think that if the man had stayed two more days my wife would have had nervous prostration. But, at last we got fixed up and as Mr. Dooly says, "there you are." Or rather here we are at 127 East Mistletoe Avenue, where we are comfortable and where we hope our friends will write us and where they will visit us when they happen to come this way.

Before closing this rambling chatter I wish to congratulate my Methodist readers upon their good fortune in getting Dr. A. L. Andrews for their pastor. Dr. A. is one of the best equipped men in Texas; was born in a college where his father was president, and has had large experience in all the work that concerns a Methodist preacher. He is a brotherly, genial man and the people of all the churches will be forced to honor and respect him. I hope and pray that the year 1915 may be the most prosperous, both for the church and for the city. Give Dr. McKee and his Presbyterian brothers and sisters my special "hello."

J. W. HILL.

FORT SILL TROOPS LEAVE POST FOR NACO, ARIZONA

Entrain Promptly Within Few Hours After Receiving Orders From Washington

Lawton, Okla., Dec. 17.—Three batteries of the Fifth field artillery, A. B. and C. stationed at Fort Sill, are on their way to Naco, Arizona, where Mexicans have been firing across the border, following receipt of orders from the war department. These are all heavy batteries, A and B being equipped with four point seven howitzers, while C is equipped with four point sevens. The batteries will go complete for field service, carrying full equipment including pack trains, and carry ten days rations.

These three batteries are fairly well filled at this time, A and C batteries having a complement of 150 men, B battery 130. The batteries will be commanded as follows: A battery, Captain Connors; B battery, Captain Hand; C battery, Captain Woods.

Three large trains will be required to transport the troops, one train to each battery. Orders concerning the movement of the troops was not received at Sill until Tuesday evening and until late in the night all was activity in preparation for an early departure. Mounted orderlies were speeding from place to place to battery commanders. The perfect system which the Fifth Field Artillery is noted was everywhere in evidence. At no place was there confusion, but intelligent and decisive action.

Two of the four point seven howitzers, part of the equipment of B battery, had been taken apart, the school of fire having closed, and gunners were busily engaged in again mounting the big guns.

It was interesting inded to watch the preparations. In battery quarters the privates were busily engaged in packing their kits. The soldiers all seemed in the best of spirits. A number who had completed their preparations were writing letters home. Battery commanders were issuing instructions to stable sergeants, to the commissary department, to sergeants in charge of the guns and caissons. Every few moments reports would be submitted as to the progress being made or as to orders having been fulfilled.

Betwen four and five hundred horses were attached to the three batteries, and 25 cars will be required to transfer them. Additional cars will be required for forage.

The provision list being checked over contained a plentiful supply of army hardtack. A large quantity of stores now consigned to the various batteries will be taken.

CREDIT SYSTEM PREVENTS DIVERSIFICATION IN CROPS

By Associated Press.

Austin, Texas, Dec. 18.—The prevailing credit system of Texas is a hindrance to diversification, in the opinion of Dr. Lewis H. Haney, professor of economics in the University of Texas, who has been devoting considerable time to the study of farm credit conditions. His findings disclose, he says, that farmers in Texas under the present system, pays about 20 per cent interest on his investment. Borrowers on crop mortgages in the State generally receive but fifty per cent on the estimated value of crops, making their borrowing power very limited. Mr. Haney says there is also a tremendous waste all through the South due to the failure of farmers to utilize labor power to its fullest extent. This condition he attributes in part at least to the specialization by merchants and bankers of the credit system for the cotton industry.
